Discussion

WARM-UP

1. As you settled in with this one, which quiet moment made you sigh, smile, or reach for a tissue in the best way?
2. If you could bottle the feeling this book gave you and keep it for a rainy day, what would you call that feeling?

DIGGING IN

1. The story leans on the idea of falling for someone all over again. When has getting to know someone slowly felt comforting to you in real life?
2. A landscaper husband quietly tends to growing things. Which small, nurturing gesture in the book felt like a warm hug to you?
3. Home and belonging thread through this story. What place, meal, or ritual makes you feel as rooted as these characters long to feel?
4. Memory shapes so much of this love story. Which shared memory of your own would you most want someone to hold onto if they forgot everything else?

GOING DEEP

1. Without giving anything away, how did the book leave you feeling about whether love is something we remember or something we choose to build again?
2. By the last page, what did this story gently teach you about holding on, letting go, or giving hope a second try? Share only as much as feels comfortable.
